Performance Management - Giving feedback and developing strategies that transform performance

Performance Management is a critical leadership competency and is central to driving results through the organisation.

Leaders and managers develop their abilities to identify the dimensions of performance and to communicate expectations. This enables them to set goals and targets that are clearly understood and to monitor subsequent employee progress and results.

The art and science of performance management is supported by the fundamental skill of 'giving feedback'. The capacity to give feedback is duly enhanced when it is received well, becoming motivational and often inspiring to recipients.*
