

Facilitate

Resonate to create meaning

A great workshop is built on the quality of the relationship between the facilitator and the participants. That relationship needs to be an authentic encounter between two or more people; one that is capable of empowering others to remove habitual assumptions that may limit their capacity to see future possibilities with fresh eyes.

Learning environments must resonate with meaning. Effective facilitation enables people to undergo rapid transformation in the way they think, feel and act through processes that embody high levels of enquiry, creativity, spontaneity and agility.*
