

Generational Alliance

Improve inter-generational relationships in the workplace and the marketplace

The generation into which we are born has as much impact on us as our education or income. For the first time in the history of the industrialised world we can find up to 4 generations existing in the workplace at the same time. In today's workplace the variances between the generations results in major differences in communication, motivation, work ethic and management styles. If not considered, these differences can reduce the effectiveness and profitability of a business as a whole.

There is an enormous opportunity to tap into the length and breadth of experience that an inter-generational workplace environment offers. By acquiring an understanding of the influences, characteristics and motivations of the individual generations, the differences between each can be leveraged for better results in all areas of the organisation.
