Lowanna uses her 20 years' experience as a program designer, facilitator, arts educator and academic to help our clients make meaningful change in a way that inspires transformational growth.

Lowanna's expertise in contemporary leadership studies, arts-based practices, design-thinking, neuroscience, learning and psychological development theories enriches all of our learning and development initiatives at PF. Her advocacy of experiential learning and a 'hands on', personal approach to learning enables participants to connect intellectually, physically and emotionally in the learning journey. She has a wealth of experience working with middle managers, executives and senior leaders to guide, monitor and motivate personal and professional development and the creation of healthy workplace communities.

Lowanna is highly skilled in bringing together a diverse group to form a cohesive whole. Her career history as an academic and facilitator at QUT has required her to navigate a diversity of groups including leaders, course and unit coordinators and student groups in order to successfully co-create and lead various experiential programs. This, coupled with 10 years working abroad has given her real insight into cultural diversity and communication, negotiating cross-cultural collaborations and the development of diverse groups of individuals.

Prior to joining Performance Frontiers, Lowanna led a number of large scale development initiatives with QUT, QPAC, Queensland Health and the Queensland Ambulance Services in the areas of leadership, attrition, healthy communication, change management, and personal development.
