Sean is a Principal at Performance Frontiers, fronting up the Sydney wing of our team.

He has over 20 years' experience in leadership development learning and social innovation, working with groups across leadership levels, industries and all parts of the world to generate breakthroughs in transformation — the kind that lead to a real positive impact in communities and global systems.

Sean's known for his signature style: brain-based, hands on, grounded in shared humanity, and, wherever possible, a lot of fun. He melds practical strategies underpinned by deep expertise in psychology with riveting stories, tools and tips from a varied and exciting career. He's enjoyed stints as an Officer in the Royal Air Force, a DHL Operations Manager in Saudi Arabia, a Social Impact lead at one of the Big Four, and even a standup comedian.

Most recently, Sean has worked with the Institute of Executive Coaching and Leadership (IECL) and PwC, designing, and delivering programs that enable people to tap into their highest potential, while addressing the complex, adaptive challenges of today. He's won awards for his work in this area, taking out Gold for the Best Unique/Innovative Leadership Development Program in both the 2019 & 2020 Brandon Hall Global Leadership Excellence Awards for a Senior Executive program he conceptualised, co-designed and facilitated.

However, if you ask Sean what gives his work meaning, it's not the awards he'll speak about. It's the stories of real personal transformation, of working on the ground with people to grow in all areas of their life and positively shape the communities of which they are a vital part. This systemic change is something he's looking to champion in all his work at Performance Frontiers.
