

Marcus de Courtenay

(He/Him)

Content Creator

Expertise:

Conceptual thinking and problem solving
High quality legal writing and advocacy
Building peer and client communication capabilities
Dispute resolution
Professional writing
Storytelling
Copy editing
Research

Qualifications:

Legal practitioner of the Supreme Court of NSW
Graduate Diploma in Legal Practice (Australian National University, Canberra)
Bachelor of Laws (First Class Honours) (Bond University, Brisbane)
Bachelor of Social Science – Criminology and Psychology (First Class Honours) ((Bond University, Brisbane)

Marcus is a content creator with a passion for making sense of a complex world. He believes that how we deliver our ideas is intrinsically connected to their meaning for our audience and he works with joy to make that meaning richer and deeper, with every word.

With many years' experience producing high quality text across a diverse range of industries, including government, law, financial services and management consulting, he is able to see through the noise and produce clarity. His educational background in law and social sciences has well equipped him to effectively conceptualize the challenges of our VUCA world and assist our clients to find the optimal path forward by leveraging data and insight.

Marcus's work in the health and finance sectors saw him champion conflict resolution and a better quality of life for everyone he encountered. A passionate and lifelong learner, his research interests lie at the intersection of science and the humanities, the locus of human potential and hope.

Marcus brings extraordinary thinking and clarity in research and writing to Performance Frontiers and has been known to graciously stretch to performance art when required.